

Dolpo Tsaga Clinic Update

*The clinic and monastery are in the background
on the other side of Tsaga village.*

*The construction crew prepares the ground and digs
the foundation.*

Photos by Geshe Tenzin Yangton, Menri Monastery

Villagers are paid to haul rocks from the riverbed for walls; all wood used for framing the structure must be brought in from lower elevations.

Cement holds rocks and walls together.

Doorway to courtyard framed, and second floor in place.

Clinic on left, monastery on right.

Due to climate changes, snow no longer covers the surrounding mountains year-round, making the future availability of water an issue.

Courtyard walls completed.

Left, the primary work crew for the clinic. Below, women of the village and a circle of school children.

